Although there is little to substantiate it, the fact remains that Poincaré, not Clemenceau, is president of France.

Notwithstanding the praise of noted professors, the 17-year locusts are not likely to appear on the menus of any Vermont hotel this summer.

A Hinesburg child ate strychnine which was intended for the sick horse and died. Have we any responsibility imposed on us in handling deadly poisons?

It is a fortunate Vermont town which can say that it did not suffer a loss of taxable polls in the past year, in spite of the inclusion of women under that classification.

Congress, in order to purge itself of the stigma, ought to rise up as one man and demand of Representative James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts that he name the congressman seen "under the influence of liquor at noonday" under the dry regime. The people of the country await action by Congress regarding the speech made by Gallivan in Boston on Monday night.

Rutland has a new industry which will employ 15 workers at first and increase the force as the business demands. It is a furniture making business, which, while not unknown in Vermont, is sufficiently rare as to make the coming of the business worthy of more than passing notice. The decision of this Connecticut concern to transfer to Vermont is another straw showing which way the industrial wind is blowing.

The war is not ended if we are to judge by the size of the casualty lists of American soldiers and German civilians in the area of Germany occupied by the American army. It is also evident that the efforts of the American command to confiscate all the arms held by the Germans have been in vain, as Germans appear now and then with weapons of various sorts with which they engage the American soldiers. It is not to be presumed that the blame for these encounters lies entirely on one side and that one particular side is the aggressor. We would not completely absolve the Americans and charge the German civilians with all the wrong-doing; nor vice versa. When people come in contact with each other as they do in this instance just after the cessation of hostilities between the two countries it makes a very delicate situation and one in which it is hard to maintain the judicial balance. It is to be expected, however, that the leaders of both sides will do their utmost to prevent the bloody clashes between individuals and between groups of people of the two nationalities.

HOW NEWSPAPERS SAFEGUARD THE PUBLIC.

It is not often that newspapers take to themselves the credit for preventing impositions on the public, but now and then the value of their services along that line is so pronounced that it cannot be overlooked. An instance of that sort cropped up recently in Rutland, where a young man, a stranger in the community, set himself up as the advance agent of John McCormack, the noted singer, and tried to book the artist for an engagement in Rutland, at the same time proposing to dispose of tickets to the concert. Through the newspaper "grapevine" from Gloverville, N. Y., it was communicated to the Rutland press that the young man was an impostor and had no connection whatever with McCormack; and immediately steps were taken to prevent the carrying out of the imposition further. The young man admitted, finally, that he had no authority to book John McCormack and seemed to desire to get out of town as swiftly as he could, only he possessed but seven solitary dollars and could not travel to his home in Jersey City in the style to which he was accustomed. Then and there the good intentions of the people went awry and they clubbed together and presented him a purse of money with which to make his luxurious travel to Jersey City, only to find later that he merely proceeded to a point in New York state, with a considerable balance in his pockets contributed by the kindness of the very people in Rutland whom he had tried to dupe. But the latter events do not affect the point which we tried to illustrate, which is, that the press oftentimes makes a valuable medium for warding off impositions from a too trusting public; and it does the service without hope of reward. Innumerable instances of a nature similar to the Rutland episode are constantly being nipped in the bud through the work of the newspapers.

CABOT

Last Sunday's children's day exercises at the Methodist church took the form of a Christian crusaders' conquest campaign and the program carried out took a martial form, with an especial appeal for new members. A very large and attentive audience was present. The result of the service was an addition to the membership of the Sunday school of 37 new scholars. The old enrollment was 60 and it is now 97. After the exercises the smaller children were served with lemonade and cake and immediately afterward a number of group pictures were taken of the children on the church steps. The church auditorium was elaborately decorated with the national colors and the entire organ loft and altar rail was clad with the season's tributes of flowers and plants. The results exceeded the expectations of the most optimistic and the pastor and Sunday school superintendent are both enthused over the healthy prospects for the future of the Sunday school. A men's Bible class was one of the new organizations brought about because of this service and it is hoped that the membership of this class will add largely to the strength of the school.

Battletown's Grand List Figures.

The listers of the town of Battletown have filed with Town Clerk Hopkins the completed grand list for 1919. As compared with last year there are 1886 polls against 1926 last year. The total grand list is $82,183.03, which is a shrinkage from last year of $1030.32, this amount, however, is more than made up by an assessment on property held by trustees acting under order of court, the grand list of which amounts to $4335, and upon which the town will receive a tax of seven-tenths of one per cent, or $308.50. Last year there was only a small amount comparatively that was held as trustee by order of court, so that the town will receive a larger tax than 1918. The grand list of the town schools, which includes all the districts outside of incorporated school district No. 2, has been reduced $2404, and although the tax rate has been increased from 60 cents to 75 cents it will hardly make up the difference and the schools will receive only the same amount of money as formerly. The grand lists of the village and incorporated school district have been increased approximately $800 each. The tax rate for the incorporated school district has not yet been fixed, but for the village it is 40 cents this year against 42 cents last.
